Celebrated as a leading work on judicial remedies for civil wrongs in English law, this accessible and enduring work is extensively revised for its fourth edition. Since the previous edition in 2004, the scope of discussion in the book has developed to include scores of new cases, new statutory material, and new academic analysis. The book is a major text for students, legal practitioners, and academics.

Features:

- An established authority on remedies
- Combines coverage of all remedies for torts, breach of contract, and equitable wrongs in one volume

New to this Edition:

- Includes two new chapters on damages under the Human Rights Act 1996, and negotiating damages
- Analysis of Supreme Court decisions on key areas such as: negotiating damages (Morris-Garner v One Step Ltd); damages for death (Knauer v Ministry of Justice); on penalty clauses (Cavendish v Makdessi); and on equitable remedies for equitable wrongs (AIB Group (UK) Ltd v Mark Redler and Co)

Andrew Burrows QC is Professor of the Law of England and a Fellow at All Souls College, University of Oxford. He is also a Barrister and Honorary Bencher of Middle Temple.
